THE GRECIAN BEND.

BY LYDIA L. A. VERY.

Let's have the old bend, and not have the new;
Let's have the bend that our grandmothers knew;
Over the wash-tub and over the churn,
That is the bend that our daughters should learn.

Let's have the bend that our grandmothers knew;
Over the cradle like good mothers true;
Over the table (the family round.)
Reading the Good Book 'mid silence pro found.

Let's have the bend that at church they did wear,
Bowing them lowly in meek, humble pray er;
Not sitting erect, with the modern-miss air,
With the "love of a bonnet" just perched on one hair.

Leave the camel his hump—he wears it fer use;
Leave the donkey his pannier—and cut yourselves loose
From fashions that lower, deform and degrade!
To hide some deformity most of them made.

Let our heads of false hair and hot yarn skeins be shorn;
Let our garments be easy and light to be worn;
Don't shake in December and swelter in June,
And appear like unfortunates struck by the moon.

Let's spend the time in things higher than dress—
Time that is fleeting and passed away;
O! let us work while we call it to day.

Let's have the old bend instead of the new;
Let's have the old hearts, so faithful and true!
Away with all fashions that lower and degrade—
To hide some deformity the most of them made!

The Lamp Post.

BY HUGH JAMES BENFIN.

"And the settlers did ample justice to the meal. The work they did gave them such strength of body that they could eat heartily without injury to themselves. The functions of their various organs were not easily interfered with. What their appetites, (not vitiated by indulgence in gourmandizing or gluttony,) craves, that they ate, and in such quantities as satisfied the natural cravings of hunger. How different this from your fashionable feasts, where your guests are cramped by so much arbitrary restraint, and yet rendered gluttonous with overfeeding!

"When the meal was ended and all its concomitants disposed of, the mother, in celebration of whose birthday the feast had been given, appeared dressed in her home-spun robe, the workmanship of her two eldest daughters, amid many exclamations of delight; while mamma's linted to their daughters that here was an example which it would be wise to follow, and fathers, looking complacently at their sons, remarked in a general sort of a way, that daughters, who were so mindful of their mother, and so practical in their industry, would certainly make most exemplary and desirable wives. This, however, is an old fogy notion, which will call from our modern misses a laugh of scorn, and which our young men seldom learn until too late. The admiration of the guests was so thoroughly sincere as to put to shame the silly compliments and hollow flattery of the elegant drawing rooms of today, although the former were expressed in awkward and blundering words and the latter clothed in elegant language, and uttered in silvery tones.

"While the party was thus turned in admiration of the splendid robe, Pete Jones turned to his brother Simon and said, in a whisper loud enough for all to hear, and which therefore attracted the attention of every ear:

"'Now Simon, now's your chance! Now if ever! Prove yourself a brave hunter—the very hunter of Hunters.'

"At this every eye was turned toward Simon whose face quickly became tinged with vermillion.

"All at once the madame Hunter gave an uneasy start, there passed over her face a look of nervous anxiety, and she exclaimed:

"'War's my darter? What's Jerushy Jane?'

"'Here I am mother,' said that damsel, stepping forward and showing herself in all her blushing beauty.

"'Now Simon,' said Pete, 'step up like a man and tell 'em wot's lost.'

"'Why there haint nothing lost, as I knows on,' was Simon's reply, an answer in which there is more philosophy than he knew of at the time.

"Mr. John Jones, Sr., knowing Pete's disposition to tease, and shrewdly suspecting the real state of the case, and, at the same time sympathizing with his oldest son's diffidence, for he remembered the time when he had asked his Sarah the all-important question, here suddenly discovered, or thought he discovered, that there was something the matter with the oxen in the pasture, and sent Pete out to see about it.

"When the party broke up, which it did when the trees began to cast long shadows over the plain, Mrs. Hunter, again gave that nervously anxious start, and once more exclaimed:

"'What's my darter? What's Jerushy Jane?' But this time the blooming beauty was not present to reply, and no one else could answer for her.

"Others then took up the enquiry, 'What's Jerushy Jane Hunter? What's Jerushy Jane Hunter?'

"But Pete, who it seems, had divined the real nature of the case, chimed in with, 'Where's Simon?'

"'Why yes,' said another, 'where is he, indeed?' And then the party was asked such questions as, 'Where can they be? How long have they been gone?' mingled with such exclamations as, 'I wonder!' 'How strange we did not miss them!' One or two maidens suddenly turned pale but said nothing. Silent and retiring worth, though distanced in the race of life by the noisy spirit of 'I will blow my own horn,' is always noticed, and revered by the select and appreciative few.

"Suddenly the paternal Jones winked to the paternal Hunter and said:

"'I suppose the young folks had something to say to each other privately, and so stole away unobserved.'

"Mr. Hunter winked in reply to this, as much as to say, 'All right Jones, you and I were once young too!' so the subject was thereupon dropped, and the party was broken up by the pleased and happy guests going home by their several ways.

"Simon and Jerusha came in ere long, looking very happy, and were very much surprised that the party had already broken up. Wandering out into the grove that old story, old yet ever new and sweet, had been told, nor did it sound the worse in Jerusha's ear for Simon's uncouth and blundering speech. That story depends not so much upon the words in which it is clothed, as upon a certain pleadingly tender manner in which it is told. The tone's of the man's voice, the tenderness of his manner, the trepidation and anxiety apparent in all he says and does, these tell the story more effectually, and plead more earnestly in the maiden's ears, than words the most eloquent, and delivery the most impassioned.

There, beneath the forest tree, were plighted their vows of eternal fidelity and the contract sealed and revealed with Cupid's seal.

That night Jerusha walked not home from the birth day feast alone, but went away leaning proudly on her lover's arm.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

For the Republican.

"Momus" vs. "D."

MESSRS. EDS:—We had hoped that our friend Rev. "D" would accept the friendly and well meant advice of our reply to him on the 9th inst., in the spirit it was given, deport himself accordingly, and cease conducting himself in a manner alike painful and surprising to his few friends; but we acknowledge our short-sightedness in not seeing that the Reverend gentleman is ambitious to keep up a controversy for the sake of cheap notoriety, making honor, dignity, truth and virtue, every noble element—if there is any in his nature—subservient to this petty ambition; and although we have kindly shown to him that giving way to angry passions, and fits of stubbornness, has made him prematurely aged, hardened his heart and softened his brain. Yet he is contrary and vindictive still, and our store of charity is almost exhausted.

In his long article of nonsensical twaddle of the 23d inst., under title of "Momus" vs. "the County Institute," he has displayed more spleen than in his first; has made a large addition to his catalogue of vile epithets, by adding vulgarism and blackguardism to profanity, and in fact has gone so far that we are unable to follow him, unless we stoop from our dignity and manhood. From a sacred reverence we have for Christianity, we deem it our duty, dear Rev. Mr. D., to counsel you once more before cleansing our hands of you, because of that unwanton and scurrilous attack upon a respectable body of Christians, and we here advise, that if you know no other way to support the church you claim to belong to, than by dividing other denominations, it is time you should learn, because you well know what opinions are held of you, and how your course is construed by all well behaved and well informed people.

As to your hear say personalities of ourself, we think them unworthy of notice, as your informant is mistaken as to whom "Momus" is, or else well knew that falsehoods would suit your purpose far better than truths.

Confidentially, Rev. "D" the only relative of "Momus" that ever applied to Mr. Magee for "a license" received it, the greatest qualification for which you know is an attendance of that "Superintendency Normal School" at Rebersburg, and which attendance, as applied to teachers receiving certificates, has certainly in many instances, outweighed talent, ability and long professional service; and as an able and active member of the Institute you can testify that there too, this preference was discernable, and the public concede that it was to the credit of the nearly one hundred teachers who refused, and did not attend the Institute; and we are assured that every teacher not in that "Normal Clique," who did attend, have since regretted it. To further illustrate the advantages of attending said Normal School, we here insert a supposed one sided dialogue between its Principal and a Mr. Q—, who has followed his avocation as a teacher from four to six months in every one of the past fifteen years,—said dialogue supposed to have taken place at a no great distance from Sinking Creek Mills, (the "Loop") Pennsvalley:

Principal—Mr. Q—, you have stood a very good examination, and I am pleased that I can average your certificate at No 2: but you are a little rusty, and if you will attend "our Normal School" this summer, to brighten yourself up, at next examination I can give you a No 1 certificate."

The old teacher steps back with his No. two, and a young stripling of eighteen, who had never taught a school, but did attend "our Normal" for a term of five months, comes forward and actually receives a No. one certificate.

Of course we will not comment upon the young man receiving the worth of his money; but is it any more reasonable to suppose that a man who has been teaching for fifteen years will become so "rusty" as to require "brightening up," than for a mechanic, after plying his trade for a like number of years to find it necessary to serve his apprenticeship anew.

Brother "D," you have made a trifling mistake in the caption of that last article—"Momus" vs. "the County Institute," and we beg of you in the name of every honorable and intelligent teacher of Centre county, to show a less vindictive nature, to write a little in the style of a gentleman, and to not dish up such a "hash" of filthy and ridiculous personalities to palm off as a defense of so many respectable ladies and gentlemen, and besides, dear Rev. Mr. D., from the very start you lost sight of the County Institute, and have done nothing all the way through but blow the bugle of your own superior talents, merits, manntre and beauty.

The next nice little thrust you give, is wherein you say we "ought not to criticise teachers on grammar, or any one (meaning yourself), on composition," etc. We admit that, for we know very well when you wrote the above, you were thinking of your excellently worded resolution, which certainly does excel any composition written during the past one thousand years, and by "dint of repetition" we promise to do our utmost to have it appreciated.

"Resolved, That while the wisdom of the too common use corporal punishment is doubtful, yet, that if used with judgment it ought not to be entirely discarded."

As you evinced a slight compunction of conscience by simply affirming the following "a deliberate falsehood," we will not make it pass by that "dint of repetition, only swearing that you have addressed over one hundred audiences, and found none to appreciate you, and furthermore, it is not possible that you ever will, and to keep it before the people we do repeat that—

"The lecture on Geology and Mineralogy, by Rev. S. J. Dorsey, showed great research, but was delivered in a harsh, stern tone and imperative manner, seeming to convey the idea 'that he had addressed over one hundred audiences, and as yet found none capable of appreciating him.'" * * * * * *

Dear Rev. Sir, you evade that "antediluvian prophesy of Genesis," and that "Natural Trinity," in a very trifling way, or perhaps though you are an expounder of the Gospel, and a teacher of young ideas, you are ignorant of the office of these little marks—(" ")—they are called quotation marks, and when a word or sentence is enclosed by them, it signifies that word or sentence as taken from some other author.

That which you denounce as an impious mockery, and a ridicule of the Holy Scriptures is so marked—can you tell good Brother, Rev. D., who is its author?

Rev. sir, does that covert threat, in your last, portend the endangering of our life in a corn stalk duel? or that you will drag us before stern justice because we have meekly submitted to your vile abuse, in return, giving you kindly advice, which to follow, would make a gentleman of you?

You say "men have a right to discourse on religious topics, and to choose their own subjects." This, sir, we do not deny; but we do claim that if Brigham Young has a right to establish what he calls a religion upon the basis of the blood atonement, order of Enoch and Adam worship; and another the right to step from the sanctuary of one church to a second, in direct Theological antagonism, to do that for them they are loth to do themselves—speak contemptuously of a third christian sect; we say, men too, have a right to cry down the licentious and brutish teaching of Polygamist Young, and also to point out the absurd fallacies of another, of whom we say he is much mistaken if he thinks the course he is pursuing will lift him up into respectability, or that it will be counted smartness, for all well bred people know it to be bad manners, and such bad manners as to beteken a poorly furnished head, and not a very good heart.

A MAN who keeps in love with his newspaper may be said to have "a weekly beauty in his life."

A Poe—m.

In December, dark and dreary, sat the writer weak and weary, pondering o'er his memoranda book of items used before—book of scrawling head notes rather, items taken nays together, then the hot and sultry weather, using up much time and leather—pondering we there items o'er. While we pondered slowly rocking (through our mind queer ideas flocking,) came a quick and nervous knocking—knocking at the sanctum door. "Sure that must be Jenks," we muttered—"Jenks that's knocking at our door; Jenks the everlasting bore."

Ah, how well do we remind us, in the walls that there confine us, "exchanges," lay behind us all scattered o'er the floor. Thought we Jenks wants to borrow some newspapers till to-morrow, and 'twill be relief from sorrow to get rid of Jenks the bore, by opening wide the door. Still the visitor kept knocking louder than before.

And the scattered pile of papers cut some very curious capers, being lifted by the breezes coming through another door; and we wished (the wish was evil for one deemed always civil) that Jenks was to the devil, to stay there evermore, there to find his love—Jenks, the never tiring bore.

Backing up our patience firmer, then, without another murmur, "Mr. Jenks" said we, "your pardon, your forgiveness, we implore. But the fact is, we were reading of some curious proceedings, and thus it was unheeded your loud knocking there before."

Here we opened wide the door. But fancy now our feelings—for it wasn't Jenks the bore—Jenks the nameless evermore.

But the form that stood before us caused a trembling to come o'er us, and memory bore us back again to the days of yore; days when "items" were in plenty, and where'er this writer went to pick up items by the score. 'Twas the dark form of our "devil" thrust in attitude uncivil, and he thrust his head within the door with—"The Foreman's out of copy, sir, and says he wants some more." Yes, like Alexander, wanted more!

Now this "local" had already walked about till nearly dead—he had sauntered through the city till his feet were very sore—walking through the streets so dusty, and by-ways running off into all portions of the city, both public and obscure—had examined every store, and questioned every "feller" whom he met from door to door, if anything was stirring—any accident occurring—not published heretofore, and had met with no success; he would rather kinder guess he felt a little wicked of the ugly little bore, with his message from the foreman that he wanted "something" more.

"Now 'tis time you were departing, you young imp," cried we, upstarting, "get you back into the office—office where you were before; or the words you have spoken will get your bones all broken (and we seized a cudgel oaken, that was lying on the floor;) take your hand out of your pocket, and leave the sanctum door; tell the foreman there is no copy you ugly little bore."

And our devil, never sitting, still is flitting, still is flitting, back and forth upon the landing just outside our sanctum door; tears down his face are streaming, strange light from his eye is beaming, and his voice is heard screaming, "Sir, the foreman wants some more."

THE great Humboldt salt mine, near Austin, Nevada, is described by a California paper as looking like a lake frozen over. The salt is as hard and as smooth as ice. Were it not for fine particles which are condensed from vapors arising from beneath, and which cover the crystalline salt to the depth of perhaps one-eighth of an inch, it would make an excellent skating rink at all times of the year, except on the very unfrequent occasions when it is covered with water. The expanse of crystallized salt is no less than 20 miles in length and 12 in width, without a break or flaw for the greater portion of that extent. The stratum of solid salt is about six or seven inches thick, under which comes a layer of sticky, singular-looking mud, about two feet thick, and under this again another stratum of solid salt, as transparent as glass, of which the depth has been found in some parts to be six feet. In Summer, this salt plain, glittering and scintillating in the light of an almost tropical sun, presents a brilliant appearance. The frosty covering and solid salt is as white as the snow, while

Coal--The Watchman and Col. Shortlidge.

In the last number of the Watchman appeared an article evidently written by Col. Shortlidge himself, saying very bitter things against us, for inserting in our paper, a communication signed 'Co-operator,' recommending mechanics, and others, to club together and procure their coal directly from the mines. We published the article, but we did not endorse it, as our readers all know; yet Col. Shortlidge, a man for whom we have always entertained the kindliest feelings, makes a very ungentlemanly and Judas-Iscariot-fling at us in the organ of the Judas Iscariot Democracy, charging us with what we never did, and what we never intended to do. We say again, that we have always respected Col. Shortlidge, and there is no man in the community that we respect and esteem more highly than we do the gentlemanly partner of Col. Shortlidge—Mr. Bond Valentine. But while this is proof that we would not seek to injure Col. Shortlidge in his business, it is no reason why the mechanics of the town should be refused a hearing, in the columns of the REPUBLICAN, on the subject of coal, or upon any other subject.

Men have rights that all other men are bound to respect. And while in accordance with this rule, coal dealers have rights; so, too, have mechanics and others. If the latter see proper to purchase their coal directly from the mines, it is not our business; but if they desire the use of our columns on this or any other subject pertaining to their convenience or welfare, they can rest assured that our columns are open.

So, too, if Col. Shortlidge, should feel himself aggrieved, he can find no better circulating medium, through which to reach the ear of the people than the columns of the REPUBLICAN. Why should Col. Shortlidge—our particular friend, seek the columns of the Watchman when he desires to injure us or our paper?

We have an article prepared on this subject; but to make room for our correspondents, we have been compelled to omit it this week. It will appear next week.

WE learn from the Raftsman's Journal, that Allie, aged 2 years, daughter of Stephen and Tillie Whipple, of Pennville, met with a fatal accident under the following circumstances:—The girl employed to do house work, poured some boiling water into a pail, and then turned around to fix the fire in the stove. While thus engaged, the little girl, who was playing with a younger brother, ran backwards against and fell into the bucket containing hot water, and was so severely scalded that death relieved her sufferings on the following Monday, notwithstanding every effort to save her life.

THE present population of the United States has been variously "guessed" at from 40,000,000 to 45,000,000, and more sanguine patriots talk of 50,000,000 now, and 200,000,000 within a generation or two. A carefully prepared estimate published in the N. Y. Tribune, gives 40,800,000 as the probable population on June 1, 1870, when the ninth census is to be taken. This is an increase of over 9,000,000; certainly very creditable under the circumstances of a decade of war and political dissensions.

HON. ANSON BURLINGAME, Minister Plenipotentiary from China to the Western powers, died on Wednesday the 23d ult., in St Petersburg, where he was negotiating a treaty similar to those concluded with the European governments for the admission of China into the great family of civilized nations.

—The Internal Revenue receipts for the month of January, were $12,470,000.

A BILL is now pending in the Penn'a. Legislature, based upon the belief that women are confined in nunneries against their will. It confers upon any three Judges in the different Judicial Districts the power to examine, and further directs them to visit, the nunneries, convents or cathedrals situated therein at least twice a year. The Judges are to have the power to summon all the female inmates, each singly, unaccompanied by any one else, and are to propound the question, "Are you contented and satisfied to remain in said convent, nunnery or cathedral?" Those wishing to be released are to be permitted to leave without further ceremony. Other provisions of the bill are designed to restore to such inmates as desire to leave any property of theirs which may have passed into possession of the officers of the institution or have been appropriated for the use of the Church during their stay. There are a number of penalties provided against any persons obstructing or resisting the execution of the law. Of course, the value of such a law depends upon the question whether there is such arbitrary confinement; this could be equally well ascertained by legislative inquiry. There seems to be no provision to repay the expense of board and lodging that the dissatisfied nuns may have incurred. If, however, there exists in the United States a class of prisoners guilty of no crime, desirous of freedom, whom the habeas corpus cannot reach, it is high time the matter should be investigated. This bill seems rather crude, but it may prove of service by attracting attention to a possible method of unjustly restraining individual liberty.

The Ninth National Census.

Francis A. Walker, Esq., Superintendent of the Census Bureau, has entered upon the duties of his office, and is organizing his forces. It is unfortunate for the country that Congress has failed to enact a new census law commensurate with the necessities of the case. Mr. Walker, who has made the subject a specialty for a long time past, labored faithfully, with others, to secure the passage of a law that would simplify, and at the same time secure greater accuracy in the labor of taking the census and making the returns. They have, however, failed to secure, through causes not necessary to specify here. The result is that the bureau goes into operation under the census laws of 1850. Mr. Walker will, however, take advantage of the experience of the past, and make such improvements as are admissable under the law, and will, no doubt, complete his labors to the entire satisfaction of the public. Dispatch, correctness, and economy are among the leading essentials in obtaining a satisfactory census, and under the superintendence of Mr. Walker we feel assured of these results.

SALARIES OF POSTMASTERS.—The re adjustment of the salaries of postmasters throughout the country has just been commenced in the office of the Auditor of the Treasury for the Post office Department. This change of salaries, which occurs every second year, involves an immense amount of labor; the new salaries being based upon sworn statements of each postmaster of the amount received during the six months ending December 31st, 1869, on account of stamps, letter postage paid in money, newspaper postage and box rents, all of which must be carefully examined. The amount which would have accrued to a postmaster as commissions under the statutes regulating compensations prior to the passage of the act now in force—which provides for an annual salary—is first calculated, and the amount of the new salary is fixed on this basis.

REMEMBERING HIS KIN.—Mr. Mosely, a Senator of the State of Virginia, got off a good thing the other day. It happens that he has about an equal quantity of negro and white blood in his veins; so he said: "that he had some of the best "white blood of Virginia coursing in his veins." "I represent both races," said Mr. Mosely, "for I am Anglo-Saxon and Anglo-African, and I desire to do justice to my kin on both sides."

We think Mr. Mosely a man of enlarged views, having a just appreciation of his relatives. Perhaps some of the F. F. V.'s will think him "a little more than kin and a little less than kind" in his remarks.

—A woman named Sarah Chaffee, with six children, ranging from an infant to seventeen years old, arrived at St. Joseph, Mo., a short time since, having walked all the way from Philadelphia except between Chicago and Quincy, a railroad passage having been procured for them between those points by some citizens of the former place. They left Philadelphia three months ago, and are bound to Lawrence, Kansas, where the woman's husband met with a serious accident some months since. They were without money when they started, and had begged their food along the road.

This is the largest single cast was made last Thursday morning—10½ tons. We understand that a new engine is being put up which will be one of the most perfect in the county, and will increase the product of the furnace to 160 or 170 tons per week.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—The anniversary of the birth of America's noblest son was usherd in with the Thermometer standing at Zero. and we experiencing the coldest weather of the season. Favorable to all demonstrations and parades it moderated a little as the day advanced. Nothing unusual was noticeable during the forenoon.

During the afternoon the "Fantastics" made their appearance. they paraded through the principal streets receiving jeers and scoffs from some and from others applause in profusion. An officer bearing the insignia of a Lieutenant appeared to be the Commander in chief. The Band poured forth, from their instruments, melodious music, from a sled upon which they were seated. There was some thing attractive here—a boy bearing the inscription which Ben. Butler, so often balls at Sun Set Cox,—"Shoo fly don't bodder me." The difference in the clothing reminded one of Moseby's Guerilla tribe. False faces were in demand.

In the evening the Literary Society gave a public entertainment at the Band Hall. The Band played the prelude. The first speaker anounced was Mr. John J. Swartz, who eloquently addressed the audience for a period of one half hour. He recounted the achievements and the glorious deeds performed by Gen. Washington and urged upon all to treasure in their hearts the principles and virtues of that venerable sage. He was followed by H. O. Kline, who declaimed an extract taken from Webster's speech before the N. Y. Historical Society Feb. 23d 1852 in commemoration of the anniversary of the birth of Washington, Miss Lucy Barnhart, read an essay entitled "Education," This essay was delivered in the best possible manner. The beauty of it was, that it was condensed and a great many ideas set forth in short but concise language. Mr. R. D. McKinney followed with a declamation entitled "The Responsibilities of American citizens." This gentleman appeared finely and in a clear, full, smooth tone did the duty assigned him.

The last speaker was Thos. Foley, Esq., who delivered an oration bearing upon the public services of Washington. He forcibly, but good naturedly, set forth some noble ideas. He is a Democrat, and I wish the Democrats to know one thing that he emphatically asserted, and that is this, that Washington opposed slavery and required his Executors never to sell or transfer his slaves, and he (Washington) appealed to the Legislative assemblies to take speedy action for the redemption of the down-trodden race. Although this question is now settled, this may be gratifying to that party whose career is about terminating.

The proceedings were interspersed with elegant music by a splendid choir, with Miss Ryncer performing upon the piano. It is impossible for me to picture the beauty of the pieces sung. We had never heard such music.

Were I to cease now I would not be doing my duty. Mr. Olport who appeared as a colored volunteer, sang for us the popular song entitled "Shoo Fly," and I am really sorry that Ben. Butler could not have listened to the song. for methinks he would never disgrace our National Hall with such slang again.

There were three hundred persons in attendance, (the admission being "free gratis for nothing,") and taken on a whole, you may rest assured that more homage could not have been made by greater men and women, nor in larger places.

So ended the anniversary, and now we must rest upon the lap of chronology, and wait till old time has again honored us with the present opportunity.

Yours Truly,
AMICUS.

Centre County's Common Schools.

MESSRS. EDS.:—In glancing over your paper of the 9th of Feb'y. I happened to see another of those abominable articles written by "Momus," in which he made the following false assertion: He attests that "one thousand two hundred dollars are annually drawn from the school funds, by a Superintendent whose incompetency no one disputes, and since whose advent in office, the Common Schools have been evidently declining.

With respect to the above, I beg space in your paper, to make a few remarks, lest the readers of your journal might believe what this fellow says.

I dispute the incompetency of our worthy and efficient Co. Supt. Since his supervision, the schools of old Centre have been on the ascendancy.—County Institutes never were effective prior to his advent in office, now they accomplish all for which they are designed. I ask no one to believe me if there is a doubt in their minds; but let them compare the statistics of the schools of our county under former officers and Mr. Magee, and I can assure them that they will compare favorably for my side of the question. Were there space I would present them here. The schools were in a bad condition when Mr. Magee assumed the duties of his office, partly from the previous poor supervision, and partly from the war from which we had but recently emerged. which had taken the best material of teachers of which 'Momus' was one. And to prove that 'Momus' is not telling the truth, and that he is merely the agent of an enemy, I would say that shortly after Mr. Magee's first election, he ("Momus") removed to Montana Territory, where he resided until this last fall, when he returned to his mother's residence in H——, Now, how is he to form a just estimate of the improvements that have been in progress since his departure? I say he cannot, and as he is a very "small gun," I would advise him to cease hurling his invective at a peaceful officer of the schools whose good breeding and sound judgement prevent him from deigning to notice the libels of "Momus."

"Momus" is a smart young man, and he very well knows it too; but he should make a more useful expenditure of his brains. One would suppose that he was the exponent of the people of Centre county when he makes such wild assertions. If he canvasses this county he will find the schools to be in a better condition than he has been disposed to grant. I am a teacher, and have been for four years; hence I am capable of knowing something of our schools. One would suppose also, that "Momus was laying the foundation of a future canvass for the office of Superintendent himself; but we have better material, and such that will not degrade the office and the schools before assuming their control.

I anticipate no reply to this, as it is unnecessary to enter into a further discussion upon this subject. I merely wished to rectify a grave error.

Yours Truly,
ALIQUIS.

DALTON, O., Feb. 21, 1870.

MESSRS. BROWN & HUTCHISON:—As my subscription expires with No. 8, (this week's paper) please find, enclosed, $3, for which send the REPUBLICAN and the American Agriculturist for one year. We all enjoy good reading and general information, and we cannot get it any better than by taking good papers such as the REPUBLICAN. So long as it advocates the true principles, it ought to be patronized. Although some delays occur, it seldom fails to come, and there is always enough eagre to read it when it arrives.

We are having a little cooler weather for a day or two past, than we have had heretofore—the coldest being ten degrees below freezing; there is about four inches of snow on the ground at this time—that being our deepest snow this winter.

Now, as I lived in old Centre for several years, and always hearing a grumbling and whining about high taxes, and I see by the REPUBLICAN that it is so yet, I, therefore, would suggest to the many readers of the REPUBLICAN, the propriety of adopting the Ohio plan of collecting taxes, which would lighten the tax very much. The several departments lay their tax that will be necessary for the different purposes, then instead of having half a dozen different duplicates, and as many collectors in each township, the whole thing is forwarded to the Co. Treas'r. Then, in October or November, he gives public notice through the columns of the papers, that he will be at his office from the 20th of December to the end of the same to receive taxes, at which time one-half of the tax has to be paid, and in the spring following, in like manner, the other half from the 20th to the end of June, thus saving the per cent. of the collection of taxes by the people in each township. Now, make a calculation of the money spent in Centre county, subtract it from the total levy, and see what a liquidation there would be.

The road tax is placed in the hands of Supervisors, or trustees as they are termed here, to be worked out on the roads; all the other taxes go together to the Treasurer. Some may say that it is too far to go to Bellefonte to pay tax. Now, many have business there at sundry times, and every man has a neighbor, and by placing several men's tax in the hands of one man, he can take and pay over for several of his neighbors, which would only be a dutiful neighboring turn.

I merely offer this for their consideration, and I think much to the benefit of the taxpayers of Centre. Our valuation is high Everything in and out of the house is valued, and every man has an exoneration of fifty dollars, so, if a poor man's valuation should not exceed fifty dollars, then he has no tax to pay only his road tax, which is two days. My valuation this year was $380; $50 exonerated; $330 taxed, and all my different taxes amounted to $4.14 besides two days work on the road. With my best wishes, I remain

HARRIS TOWNSHIP, Feb. 22d 1870.

MESSRS EDS.—We had a visit from the Editor of the National, alias McCracken alias W. H. H. Brainerd. When he returned home he gave quite a glowing description of matters about Boalsburg and vicinity. I see he has made a tour through the "barrens" and Pine Grove &c., and gives quite a description of his travels and of the inability of his subscribers to pay their back dues. As regards Boalsburg he has seen many nice things, and new under the sun; but one thing did not, I think, appear new to him, that is Fredy Meyer's tavern. He appeared to enjoy himself well at that place. It appears he was in the Academy at society meeting, taking notes; but left before it was out, to get some of the good stuff that Fredy has in his cellar.

The Editor alias McCracken, speaks of Fredy quiting, the business in the spring and retiring to private life, provided he can dispose of his stock in the cellar. Now I know of no better way than for Mr. McCracken, alias the Editor of the "wind mill which runs by water" to come to Boalsburg and relieve him of that stuff. In fact he saw so many things in town when he was at Fredy's, I do not say that he saw snakes, nor did I hear that he did, but perhaps he would have seen them if he had remained a few days longer. Come on McCracken give us another visit and help Fredy out of the business. You must, however, let Squire Jack, and S. H. Stover, know when you are coming so that they can replenish their stock of tobacco.

Very truly, &c,
D. A. C.

Recommended by the Medical Faculty and many thousands of our best citizens. Read the testimony of Physicians and patients who have used Rosadalis; send for our Rosadalis Guide to Health Book, or Almanac for this year, which we publish for gratuitous distribution; it will give you much valuable information.

Dr. R. W. Carr, of Baltimore, says:

I take pleasure in recommending your ROSADALIS as a very powerful alterative. I have seen it used in two cases with happy results—one in a case of secondary syphilis, in which the patient pronounced himself cured after having taken five bottles of your medicine. The other is a case of scrofula of long standing, which is rapidly improving under its use, and the indications are that the patient will soon recover. I have carefully examined the formula by which your Rosadalis is made, and find it an excellent compound of alterative ingredients.

Dr. Sparks, of Nicholasville, Ky., says he has used Rosadalis in cases of Scrofula and Secondary Syphilis with satisfactory results as a cleanser of the Blood I know no better remedy.

Samuel G. McFadden, Murfreesboro', Tenn., says:

I have used seven bottles of Rosadalis, and am entirely cured of Rheumatism; send me four bottles, as I wish it for my brother, who has scrofulous sore eyes.

Benjamin Bechtol, of Lima, Ohio, writes, I have suffered for twenty years with an inveterate eruption over my whole body; a short time since I purchased a bottle of Rosadalis and it effected a perfect cure.

Rosadalis is sold by F. P. Green and Druggests generally.

REVIVAL.—For several weeks, a meeting has been in progress, at Eagle Works, under the auspices of the Evangelical Association. Over fifty souls have been converted and the good work continues. A majority of those who have espoused the cause of Christ, are heads of families, in fact, some of them well stricken in years

In the absence of the regular minister, the meeting has been conducted by their worthy and efficient class leader. May the good work go on.

CONCERT.—Mrs. M. S. Dunham, and her pupils assisted by other ladies and gentlemen and the Milesburg String Band, will give a concert of vocal and instrumental music. in Reynolds' new Hall, on Saturday evening, March 12, 1870. The reputation of Mrs. Dunham as a superior musician would of itself be sufficient to attract a large audience, but as she will be assisted on the occasion by fifty performers embracing the best musical talent in the county, we predict the house will be an overflowing one, and the richest musical treat ever enjoyed by our citizens. Tickets are for sale at Frank Green's Drug Store, and at the book store of J. D. Miller, in the Postoffice.

REYNOLDS' HALL.—M'lle Marie Zoe, the beautiful Cuban Sylph, and her great New York Company, and Brass Band are announced to appear at Reynolds' Hall, for two nights only, Friday and Saturday, March 4th and 5th. M'lle Zoe, is spoken of by our exchanges in the highest terms and as she has long held the position of a first class Star, and bringing with her a well selected corps of artistes. We have no hesitation in saying, she will find the citizens of Bellefonte, as capable of appreciating good talent, as any whom she has visited. M'lle presents two of her master pieces, on Friday, the Flowers of the Forest and on Saturday, the French Spy, and each evening's entertainment is concluded with a Farce in which the funny E. W. Marston, sends his audience home in high glee. Reserved seats can be secured at J. D. Miller's Book Store.

BOOT AND SHOE MANUFACTURING IN ELMIRA.—Nine years ago a boot and shoe manufactory was established in Elmira by Mr. J. Richardson, and, as we now learn from the Gazette, has grown to be one of the largest establishments of the kind in the country. A large four story building is occupied by the manufactory, and during the past year an average of two hundred hands have been employed, and they turned out six thousand cases of boots, twelve pairs in each, and six hundred cases of shoes, each containing sixty pairs, making 108,000 pairs in the aggregate. The weekly payments to workmen have reached $2,000, and the sales for 1869 reached $460,000.—Exchange.

It is only by establishing manufacturing establishments that the permanent prosperity of any place can be secured, and we can see no reason why a similar establishment could not be profitably operated in Bellefonte. By our business men giving substantial aid to such an enterprise, they would enhance their own business four fold. Let the project be discussed.

For the Republican.

"Coal Manopolies" Again.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—

As you were kind enough to publish my article, suggesting to mechanics the propriety of co operation in the purchase of coal, and as my statements have been questioned by you and your correspondent "B," and denounced editorially by the Watchman, and myself basely slandered and blackguarded by another paper published in this place claiming all the moral decency of the community; I am constrained to ask you to be kind enough to publish this communication.

My article published in your paper of the 16th of February, was written and sent to your office two weeks before it appeared in your paper. At the time of penning it I had no particular coal operator in view, but made my suggestions for the sole benefit of the mechanics and laboring men of the place, of whom I am one. I never purchased a pound of coal from Shortlidge, and was not even acquainted with him, and am not yet. I did not write my article until after a thorough investigation of the facts therein contained and the experiment had been tested by some of our best citizens. This much is said for the benefit of yourselves and others who it seems felt agrieved at my statement of facts.

We will now take your correspondent B's own figures and see what they show. He says, in November last, coal sold at the mines for $4,25 per gross ton of 2240 pounds, that the freight on it to Howard was $2,25 per ton gross weight which would make a gross ton (2240 pounds) cost delivered, at Howard $6,50. He says this coal was retailed at $7,50 per ton of 2000 pounds and only left the dealers a profit of fifty cents per ton of 2000 pounds. Any person of common sense can see by his own figuring that the profits would be just one dollar per ton net weight (2000 pounds,) and the 240 pounds over, on each ton sold, extra profits. Now a person adding in such a bungling way as he has done, does not understand his subject and the common rules of mathematics, or he does it with a wilful intention to deceive. In either case his statements on other points should be taken with a great deal of allowence. If the co-operators in Howard, that B. Speaks of, employed him to figure up their cost and profits in the same way that he figures up Lucus Bro.'s, we opine their loss was not very heavy.

If the firm that B. speaks of should sell five hundred gross tons per year, which is a low estimate, at B's own figures, their profits would amount to nine hundred and fifty dollars. But B's figures like Shortlidge's in the last Watchman are not correct, as the profits on a ton of coal, if common prulence is exercised by the purchaser, is nearly three times that amount, for the average price of Anthracite coal, at the Pennsylvania coal mines has been but $2.25 per gross ton, since the first day of last December, up to the first day of last February, as can be seen by that coal companies trade circulars. Coal purchased at the mines of that company, and shipped over the Erie Railroad, and to Weehauken, N. J., a greater distance from the mines than it is from the mines to Bellefonte, has been retailed in Weehauken, N. J., and delivered at the purchasers door for $4,75 per ton. These facts which are well known by coal dealers and the public at large, more than confirms my former statements, which "coal monopolies" and their hired lackies, for reasons best known to themselves, would wish the public not to become acquainted with

Now the most of coal dealers, at least all who understand their business, know about the amount of coal that they can dispose of in their respective localities, and purchase that amount when the price of coal is the lowest at the mines. If people who retail coal do not understand their business, and pay more than the lowest market price, we think it is not right that consumers should be made pay for the incompetency of retail coal dealers, consequently consumers have nothing to do with the bills of purchase shown by Mr. Shortlidge in the last Watchman.

The co-operative plan, as we said before, has been tried in this place, and consequently we know whereof we affirm, and a larger number of persons have again entered into a club for the purpose of supplying themselves with coal for the ensuing year. This association now numbers over 30 families, and others are being admitted almost daily, and the pretended reduction of the price of coal at this late date, by Shortlidge, comes too late, and with a very poor grace, as several people hold his receipts for coal purchased of him as late as the 24th of last January, which show his charge to be at that time $9,20 per ton of 2000 pounds.

If there was no truth in my former article, why was it necessary for coal monopolies to pay correspondents and publishers of newspapers to attack Co-operator?

Is not the very fact that they have done so, proof positive that there is "something rotten in Denmark," and very suggestive of the old poetical couplet which says:

"What rogue 'ere felt the halter draw
With good opinion of the law"

If my statements were incorrect they could not have been injured by them, but we ask, is not the fact of their being able to pay correspondents and editors to lie for them corroborative evidence of the truth of my former assertions?

In this communication, which shall be my last on this subject, and in my former one, I have not alluded to Bituminous coal, as the community are satisfied that Mr. Rhoads retails that article to the citizens at reasonable figures.

Thanking you, if you publish this, I remain

CO-OPERATOR.

BELLEFONTE, Feb. 28, 1870.

THE useful and the beautiful are admirably combined in the American Agriculturist for March 1st,—an advance copy of which has come to hand The cover Frontispiece now gives fine original sketches in each paper. Perhaps the best "cattle piece" ever published with letter press, adorns the first inside page; a Mexican Threshing Machine scene is the leading middle Cartoon; and a "Street Scene" in China, described to the life in a chapter by "Carleton," gives us a conception of that country almost equal to a personal visit. A medium-sized, Convenient Dwelling, fully illustrated and described, affords many hints to all who are building or improving their Homes. Cutting up Beef, Maple Sugar Making, Useful Implements, Fruits, Flowers, Household Work. Nuts for Boys and Girls, etc., are the subjects of other engravings—in all, between forty and fifty in this one paper. Exposure of Humbugs, Walks and Talks on the Farm, Work for the Month, in the Garden, and in the House, Chapter on Horses, etc., etc., fill up the ample pages of this journal, rendering it one of the most useful as well as the cheapest, anywhere published, for the Farm, the Garden, the Household, (the little ones included), for City, Village and Country. Term: $1.50 per year four copies for $5. Orange Judd & Co., Publishers, 245 Broadway, New York.

A NEW INDUSTRIAL JOURNAL.—The Technologist is the title of a new Industrial Journal devoted to Engineering, Manufacturing and Building, that comes to us freighted with valuable articles. The distinguished feature of this Journal is the fact that all the articles and Illustrations are original—no clippings or old engravings being used.

The number before us consists of forty-four large pages, and it is printed on very superior paper, and in the best style of the typographic art. Altogether, it is the finest-looking journal of practical science now before the public. The titles of a few of the subjects discussed are,—Technological Education, Tempering Steel, Trial of Steam Engines, Improvement in Distillation, Sunless and Airless Dwellings, the Measurement of Electrical Resistance, Vision and the Stereoscope, the Walks of New York Central Park, East River Bridge Caissons, the Microscope, Lessons on Drawing, Relation of Technology to Insurance, etc., etc. The yearly subscription is two dollars and the price of single numbers twenty cents.

The Technologist is issued by the Industrial Publication Company, whose office is at 176 Broadway, New York. Every mechanic ought to send for at least one number of this journal. If they send for one, it will be strange if they do not send for the others.

A PROFUSE and many times excessively offensive discharge from the nose. With stopping of the nose at times impairment of the sense of smell and taste, watering or weak eyes, impaired hearing, irregular appetite, occasional nausees, pressure and pain over the eyes, and at times in the back of the head, occasional chilly sensations, cold feet, and a feeling of lassitude and debility are symptoms which are common to catarrh, yet all of them are not present in every case. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cures catarrh in its worst form and Stages. It is pleasant to use and contains no poisonous or caustic drugs.

Sent by mail on receipt of sixty cents. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.

A PAYING INVESTMENT.—Investments vary in the amounts produced. Six per cent. used to be good, and ten per cent. is fair now. But Zimmerman Bro's & Co., are able to allow purchasers of their Sewing Machines one hundred or more per cent. clear gain. This is easily demonstrated, one week's sewing by hand by the most accomplished may be done in a day by the American Machine.

Enlightened nations only use complicated machinery. Supply yourself at once with an American, if you have none yet and rank with the most enlightened. There are also great bargains in store goods to be had in the establishment of the above firm, if you don't delay too long.

STRONG FIRM.—It is with pleasure we call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Messrs. Forster, Devling & Wilson. Who does not know Maj Forster, Joseph Devling and John Wilson. Three clever, energetic, gentlemenly men. They will make a strong firm, and the people will find it to their advantage to call and see them.

They intend moving in the spring, to the rooms formerly occupied by Messrs. Loeb, May & Loeb, in the Turner building, on Allegheny street. In the meantime they are selling off their old stock at cost, indeed some of it much less than cost. Call and see them.

A DONATION.—We learn from our Milesburg reporter that the Rev. E. Butler, Pastor of the M. E. Church, at that place was the recipient, on Saturday evening, the 19th ult., of a handsome donation. While the old veteran of the Cross was at his post in the sacred desk, his house was opened and two wagon loads of every variety of provisions were deposited in his kitchen.

The donation came from the good people of Eagle Iron Works, showing, thereby, their appreciation of one who has not failed to proclaim to them the whole counsel of God.

GARDEN SEEDS.—C. W. Lambert, of the Sunny Side Gardens, has gone into the Garden Seed business, and has made arrangements by which to supply the people of Centre county, with good and fresh seeds, true to name. Persons wishing to supply themselves with genuine seeds, and who have grown tired of being humbugged by the worthless seeds of travelling agents and others, can find just what they want at the Book Store of J. D. Miller, in the Post Office building.

AN OLD PETITION.—The following old petition—the original copy of which is in the possession of Mr. J. L. Mussina, of Williamsport—was written by Judge Burnside, about sixty years ago. At that time Bellefonte aspired to be the State Capitol, and the Judge set forth its advantages very clearly in the petition which was circulated quite extensively. As a scrap of local history it will be found quite interesting:

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in general assembly met:

The petition of the subscribers, inhabitants of Centre county, humbly represents:

That at a time when the attention of your honorable body is turned to the important object of establishing permanently the seat of government of this Commonwealth, they consider it their duty to point out the town of Bellefonte as a situation combining in an eminent degree the requisites for such site. It will not escape your wisdom, that in selecting the future seat of government, it may be right to consider what will be (even more than what is), the situation of Pennsylvania. It is believed that the northwestern and northern parts of the State, are as capable of as high cultivation, and of sustaining as many inhabitants, as the southern and eastern sections; when the Commonwealth shall have attained this desirable state of improvement, Bellefonte will be the centre of population, as well as of territory, and then, certainly an attempt will be made to establish the seat of government at that place. If it can be contemplated that factions and evil disposed persons could ever attempt a dismemberment of, and division of the State, the seat of government being established in a situation such as above pointed out, will effectually guard against and defeat such attempt.

The southern and eastern part of the State, on account of their proximity to markets and navigation, have already attained a high degree of cultivation and population. To facilitate and expedite the settlement and population of the uncultivated lands, and thereby add directly to the number of citizens and consequent wealth of the State, is an object worthy the wisdom and patriotism of our Legislature; and perhaps no method can be proposed more likely to effect these desirable objects, than establishing promptly the seat of government sufficiently near to the uncultivated land to afford encouragement to the industry and enterprize of the first settlers, by the certainty of obtaining necessaries easily and cheaply, and as great advantages as possible in the sale of their produce. And if domestic manufactures are to be encouraged, no place affords greater advantages for this purpose than the one here pointed out; even its distance from any seaport by enhancing the price of foreign articles will operate as a premium on those that may be manufactured here.

If it should be thought by the Legislature an object to increase the trade and importance of Philadelphia, and to encourage to a certain degree the intercourse of this Commonwealth with that, our commercial capital, this object would evidently be promoted by placing the seat of government in a situation likely to open a direct communication with Lake Erie, and the western counties, and by such communication to induce our citizens to carry their produce direct to our seaport in reference to that of a neighboring State. The situation of Bellefonte (precisely central in the State) will place the offices attached to the seat of government at an equal distance from the citizens of the opposite parts of the State, and the western and northern sections have most business with the office; and moreover will afford to those officers and to the Legislature that safety from hostile aggressions, which cannot be afforded in the eastern parts of the State; for although we ardently hope it may be very long ere an enemy shall march over any part of your territory, yet in the course of human events such an occurence is possible, and in securing the evidences of the titles of the State it may not be amiss to contemplate and provide against such an event.

It will not be said by those who know the place, that the Legislature and officers of government could not be provided for at Bellefonte, for although that might be partly true, should the removal take place in a month, yet such are the advantages in point of climate, water and soil, that before public buildings could be erected, it is morally certain that the enterprizing ready thriving borough sufficiently to accommodate all who may visit the seat of government.

For these and other reasons, which will occur to your good sense, we beg eave to suggest to your honorable body, the propriety of establishing the permanent seat of government of the State of Pennsylvania, at the town of Bellefonte, in the centre of the State.

And wore out all their clothing.

From ocean unto ocean,
And we buy clothes from A. STERNBERG,
A most delightful notion.

No. 6, BROKERHOFF'S ROW,

NEXT DOOR

The Bellefonte Republican.

WEDNESDAY MORNING Mar. 2, '70

From the Irish Republic.

SIDE BY SIDE.

BY REV. CHARLES W. DENISON.

The following beautiful poem is from the pen of an American gentleman who has contributed, in prose and verse, for The Irish Republic, some of the most stirring pieces that have appeared in our pages. It is exceedingly gratifying to us to find men of the stamp of Mr. Denison interested in our great work. It is the magic name of "Liberty" which makes brothers of all men. Mr. Denison being one of those whose conception of liberty is limited by no geographical lines, strikes a blow for humanity wherever he can. We wish that our people would rise to the greatness of this American Idea, which embraces all men true to liberty:

Our Union colors had won the day!
Side by side on the field we lay;
Darkly the night its curtains spread,
All over our heaps of patriot dead.
Damp blew the blast of the morning gale,
Fiercely sweeping the gloomy vale,
Close by the edge of the tangled wood,
Where our brave old gun had sternly stood

The shivered tree, the blackened fern,
Palled on the gaze at every turn;
The fires burned dim in the shadowy camp!
We heard the sentries—tramp! tramp!
tramp!
Deeper and darker the vapors grew;
Colder and fiercer the fog winds blew;
Feebler and fewer the groans we heard;
Rank and file, not a soldier stirred!
Under the tent of the star-lit sky
We laid, like a host stretched out to die!

Close to my comrade's side I prest,
And spread my hands on his heaving breast;
My palms passed nervously to and fro,
As I touched his pulse, so faint and slow;
Then I gave him all I had left to part—
The warmth of a brother soldier's heart.

The night wore on. Grim silence fell
On the plowed up wastes of shot and shell;
But we saw, by the light our camp fires gave,
High at the front, our standard wave;
And, oh! how we loved, on that plain of scars,
The broad, free flag of stripes and stars!

I lifted his head, as my comrade slept;
He murmured "coming!" and sighed and wept;
His tears rained fast on my coat of blue,
And mingled their drops with the midnight dew.
"Coming mother!" I heard him sigh,
As the salt tides brimmed in his glazing eye;
"Coming, over the stormy sea;
My furlough is bringing thy boy to thee!"
His trembling hand waved a winsome beck,
And his clay lips sank on my dripping neck.

The night was past. The morning broke
As our reveille its echoes woke,
And I knew, by the sound of the rolling drum,
Our picket-relief, at last, had come!

I had dreamed I sailed for my native hills,
Through gulfs of bergs, and fogs, and chills
I floated, all dark, in a ship of ice,
That held me fast in a giant vise;
I steered to find my mother's door,
But the snow-drifts choked my slippery oar;
And again and again, as I sought the track,
The weird winds howled—"Go back! go back!"
And I woke, as I heard the dismal sound,
Still by my comrade, stiff on the ground!

Gently, softly, I called his name;
I waited; I listened; no answer came!
Slowly I raised his frosty head;
It fell in my arms! He was dead—stone dead!

Ah! then I knew, as I loosed my hold,
Why, all that night, I had slept so cold,
Why I had dreamed of that wintry tide;
I had lain with a dead man—side by side.

Horace Greeley on Buying Farms.

EVERY LOCALITY HAS ITS ADVANTAGES AND DISADVANTAGES.

From Mr. Greeley's third article in the New York Tribune, on "What I know about Farming," we extract some views relative to the best locality, in which to buy a farm. He says:

When my father was over sixty years old, and had lived some twenty years in Erie County Pennsylvania, he said to me: "I have several times removed, and always toward the West; I shall never remove again; but were I to do so, it would be toward the East. Experience has taught me that the advantages of every section are counterbalanced by disadvantages, and that, where any crop is easily produced, there it sells low, and sometimes cannot be sold at all. I shall live and die right here: but, were I to remove again, it would not be toward the West.

This is but one side of a truth, and I give it for whatever it may be worth. Had my father plunged into the primitive forest in his twenty-fifth rather than his forty-fifth year, he would doubtless have became more reconciled to pioneer life than he ever did. I would advise no one over forty years of age to undertake, with scanty means, to dig a farm out of the dense forest, where great trees must be cut down an cut up, rolled into log-heaps and burned to ashes where they grew. Where half the timber can be sold for enough to pay the cost of cutting, the case is different; but I know right well that digging a farm out of the high woods is, to any but a man of wealth, a slow, hard task. Making one out of naked prairie, five to ten miles from timber, is less difficult, but not much. He who can locate where he has good timber or one side and rich prairie on the other is fortunate, and may hope, if his health be spared, to surround himself with every needed comfort within ten years. Still, the pioneer's life is a rugged one, especially for women and children; and I should advise and man who is worth $2,000 and has a family, to buy out an "improvement" (which, in most cases, badly needs improing) on the outskirts of civilization, rather than plunge the unbroken prairie.

He who has a farm already, and is content with it, has no reason to ask, "Whither shall I go?" and he may rest assured that thoroughly good farming will pay as well in New England as in Kansas or Minnesota. I advise no man who has a good farm anywhere and is able to keep it, to sell and migrate. I know men who make money by growing food within twenty miles of this city quite as fast as they could in the West. If you have money to buy and work it, I believe you may find land really as cheap, all things considered, in Vermont as in Wisconsin or Arkansas.

And yet I believe in migration—believe that there are thousands in the Eastern and Middle States who would improve their circumstances and prospects by migrating to the cheaper lands and broader opportunities of the West and South. For, in the first place, most men are by migration rendered more energetic and aspiring; thrown among strangers, they feel the necessity of exertion as they never felt it before. Needing almost everything, and obliged to rely wholly on themselves, they work in their new homes as they never did in their old; and the consequences are soon visible all round them.

"A stern chase in a long chase," say the sailors; and he who buys a farm mainly on credit, intending to pay for it out of the proceeds, finds interest, taxes, sickness, bad seasons, hail, frost, drouth, tornadoes, floods, &c., &c., deranging his calculations and impending his progress, until he is often impelled to give up in despair. There are men who can surmount every obstacle and defy discouragement—these need no advice; but there are thousands who, having little means and large families, can grow into a good farm more easily and far more surely than they can pay for it: and these may wisely seek homes where population is yet sparse and land is consequently cheap. Doubtless, some migrate who might better have forborne; yet the instinct which draws our race toward sunset is nevertheless a true one. The East will not be depopulated: but the West will grow more rapidly in the course of the next twenty years than ever in the past. The railroads which have brought Kansas and Minnesota within three days and California within a week of us, have rendered this inevitable.

In closing his article, he refers with special favor to the South, where lands are still very cheap. It is better timbered, in the average, than the West; the climate invites; the unopened mines and unused water-power call loudly for enterprise, labor and skill. It is absurd to insist that the soil is exhausted when not one-third of it has ever yet been ploughed. I do not advise solitary migration to the South, because she needs schools, roads, bridges, mills, &c., &c., which the solitary immigrant can neither provide nor well do without; and I have no assurance that he, if obliged to work out for present bread, would find those ready to employ and willing to pay him; but let a hundred northern farmers and mechanics worth $1,000 to $3,000 each combine to select (through chosen agents) and buy ten or twenty thousand acres in some Southern State, embracing hill and vale, timber and tillage, water power and minerals, and divide it equitably among themselves, after laying it out with roads and park, a village, plat, sites for churches, schools, &c. and I am confident that they can thus make pleasant homes more cheaply and speedily there than almost anywhere else.

The Village Pastor.

The Educational Gazette gives the following truthful sketch of a class which in our opinion do more labor than they get credit for—on earth;

In the retired villages of our land, the pastor often becomes a source of civilization and refinement to those around him. His simple and unpretending manners; his house, with its modest ornaments; his garden, tended and decked by the hands of taste; these impart some relish for improvement among his poorer and ruder neighbors But further, he is ever at hand to relieve to instruct, to advise, and to console his flock. His purse, scanty as it often is, administers to their temporal wants; and he is yet more their benefactor by organizing and conducting plans more systematically formed for their relief. His influence may arrest the heavy arm, or soften the hard heart that would oppress them. His superior knowledge guides them through difficulties where no other friend is near to give them counsel. His authority composes their little feuds and jealousies. His words of sympathy and consolation soothe their distresses. His vigilant eye marks their first deviations from rectitude, and brings back the yet unhardened and reclaimable transgressor into the path of innocence. He is, in the great majority of instances, aided by a partner, whose co-operation is by so much the more valuable, as her habits qualify her for every task of gentleness and mercy, more especially when she has to deal with the sick or the afflicted, the ignorant or the vicious, of her own sex.

The marriage portion of a bride in the olden time was a feather bed, six chairs, a cherry bureau and table, six cups and saucers, six teaspoons and a quantity of sand for sanding the floors.

Two German physicians report the case of a man brought to a lunatic asylum who imagined himself made of glass, and lived in constant terror of being smashed to pieces.
